No. 4, 40 men; No. 3, 35 men; and No. 5, 30 men, as per vote of the town. There have been a number of fires during the year. The first was the boiler house of M. & S. Lapham, which was soon put out by the force pump, without giving a general alarm. The second fire was the Sash and Blind Factory of C. D. Morse & Co., on the 24th of July, and the fire company was out in full force; also a fire company from Grafton; all worked well and did much towards saving the surrounding buildings, but owing to the combustible nature of the factory, it was impossible to save it. The next fire was the house and barn of Samuel Austin Small, in West Millbury, but as there was not a general alarm given, the fire department was not out in full force, as it would have been had they known it sooner. The fourth fire was the barn of Peter Dolan, soon after, and near the place of Mr. Small, but as the alarm was not general, the department was not out in full force. The next fire was the shop of Chester Hastings, Jan. 2d, 1872. Engines No. 3 and 4, were called out, but as the alarm was not given till the building was well on fire, the engines could not do much good. The next fire was the dry house of Nelson Walling, Jan. 3d, the alarm was general and the department were out in full force, but the force pumps were quickly started and soon put it out. The seventh fire was the house and saw mill of Geo. & W. Rice; the alarm was not general and only No. 4 engine was on hand with a part of the company, but in consequence of the extreme cold and the rapid progress of the fire, not much could be done to save the buildings.

There have also been several false alarms.
